Author's Reflection

I may not know your pain... something always happens.

Dedication

To the memory of my father... make something happen for one another.

Back Cover

“If You give me my life back, I’ll serve You until I’m seventy-five.”

The prayer of an eight-year-old... Some promises cost more than you know.

Miracle triplets. Born at 27 weeks... legend has a price.

Lagos. Akure. London. Three fires; not everyone survived.

“Something always happens.” A brother’s words became prophecy.

- Grandmother who spoke to spirits.
- Sister’s death that opened visions.
- Romance that nearly killed him.
- Marriage that tried to erase him.
- A son he still fights to father.
- A brother whose last words echo.

“Where was God when David died?” ... system designed to make fathers disappear.

This isn't survival. It's resurrection. When the world says “finished,” grace says, “Something always happens.”

ABRAHAM OF LONDON

Miracle child. Marked man. Devoted father. The brother who remembers. The father who refuses to disappear.

Retailer Description

True story spanning Lagos, Akure, London... blueprint for men under pressure.

Documentation, boundaries, legacy over litigation.

If you've been told to disappear, this is your brother at the door... grace is louder.

One-Page Synopsis

Miracle child → strategist and father; denied work; legal maze; fighting to father.

Chooses structure over spectacle; presence over performance; strategy for legacy.

He stayed by grace. Because something always happens—so does he.

Excerpt — Ch. 18

Quiet suffering: delays and silence; nearly two years unable to work... He did not disappear. Good men must stop disappearing—even when systems want them to.

Reader Promise

Language for pain.

A father's blueprint.

A stubborn, earned hope.

You are not a case number. When fear says “stop,” grace says, “Something always happens.”
