Some doubts aren't rebellious. They're terrified.

Because if you were wrong about God, what else collapses?

Your morality. Your meaning. Your hope. Your suffering.

So you keep questions locked away and call it "faith."

Here's the mature posture:

Ask the hard questions without becoming cynical.

Seek truth without becoming arrogant.

Hold conviction without pretending you're omniscient.

This week, do something brave:

- write down your biggest fear about God
- not the polite fear - the real one
- then bring it into prayer honestly

God is not offended by sincerity.

If anything, He's offended by the religious theatre we use to avoid Him.

Truth can handle pressure. And so can the God of truth.
