You keep feeling behind.

Behind in money. Behind in marriage. Behind in career. Behind in life.

But behind who?

A curated timeline? A filtered photo? A person you've never actually lived with?

Tonight, do this:

- list what you survived in the last 12 months
- then ask: "Would I judge someone else for recovering slowly?"

Probably not.

So stop punishing yourself for being human.

You are not behind.

You are becoming.

And that takes time -- the kind you can't rush without breaking.
