

PUBLIC • PREMIUM

When Youre Building Someone Elses Legacy

Most of us inherit our ambitions long before we ever question them. We borrow dreams like hand-me-down clothes: - The respectable career - The sensible path ...

Abraham of London • 2026-04-27

Most of us inherit our ambitions long before we ever question them.

We borrow dreams like hand-me-down clothes:

- The respectable career
- The sensible path
- The version of success our culture hands out like a template

And because the people who gave us the blueprint loved us, we never stopped to ask if it was ours.

Before you take the next "logical step":

- Write down three pursuits you inherited, absorbed, or obeyed.
- Ask the dangerous question: "If no one would be disappointed, would I still want this?"
- The answers will feel rebellious. Let them.

Your life is not an heirloom. It's uncharted territory.

And God did not put you here to maintain someone else's map.