

PUBLIC • PREMIUM

When You Dont Trust Your Own Decisions

Some of you don't make decisions. You collect permissions. You ask everyone: - friends - mentors - the internet - strangers in comments Then you still feel a...

Abraham of London • 2026-04-21

Some of you don't make decisions.

You collect permissions.

You ask everyone:

- friends
- mentors
- the internet
- strangers in comments

Then you still feel anxious.

Because the problem isn't lack of advice.

It's lack of trust in yourself.

Here's the truth:

Confidence doesn't come before decisions. It comes after repeated decisions.

You build it by:

- choosing
 - learning
 - adjusting
 - choosing again
-

This week, reclaim agency:

- decide one small thing without consulting anyone
- follow through
- forgive yourself for imperfection

You don't need perfect outcomes to trust yourself.

You need evidence that you can recover.

And you can.