

PUBLIC • PREMIUM

When You Keep Confusing Niceness With Goodness

Niceness is easy to sell. It looks polite. It sounds gentle. But niceness is often cowardice with good branding. Because niceness avoids discomfort. Goodness...

Abraham of London • 2026-04-21

Niceness is easy to sell.

It looks polite. It sounds gentle.

But niceness is often cowardice with good branding.

Because niceness avoids discomfort.

Goodness does not.

Here's the blunt truth:

If your kindness never costs you anything, it might not be kindness. It might be fear of being disliked.

This week, choose goodness over niceness:

- state a boundary clearly
- tell the truth without cruelty
- confront what needs confronting

You can be gentle and still be firm.

Goodness doesn't scream.

But it does not lie.