Governance

{ "Governance is not 'management'; management is about efficiency, but governance is about alignment." }

In the Canon, Governance is the immune system of an institution. It is the set of protocols that prevents "Strategic Drift." It requires the courage to enforce constraints and the discipline to maintain rhythms even when they feel repetitive.

The Three Layers of Governance

- Self-Governance: The ability to regulate one's own appetites, emotions, and time. This is the prerequisite for all other forms of authority.
- Domestic Governance: The ordering of the household (roles, rituals, finances) to create a "stable floor" for future generations.
- Institutional Governance: The formal structures (boards, agendas, ledgers) that protect a mission from the ego of its leaders.

> { "\"Authority is the right to rule; Governance is the skill of maintaining that rule.\"" }

{ "Integrity is not just 'honesty'; it is structural soundness." }

In engineering, a bridge has integrity when it can support its intended load without collapsing. In the Canon, a person has Integrity when their private character can support the weight of their public office.

The Components of Integrity

- Consistency: Acting the same way in the dark as you do in the light.
- Wholeness: The absence of "compartmentalization." You are the same person in the Strategy Room as you are at the family table.
- Alignment: The bridge between Purpose and Proof. If you say your purpose is "X" but your proof is "Y," you have a fracture in your integrity.
