

PUBLIC • PREMIUM

When You Argue With God In Your Head

You don't call it doubt. You call it "processing." "being realistic." "thinking deeply." But if we're honest, you've been arguing with God. In your head. / ...

Abraham of London • 2026-04-21

You don't call it doubt.

You call it "processing." "being realistic." "thinking deeply."

But if we're honest, you've been arguing with God.

In your head.

Here's the strange truth:

God is not threatened by your questions. He is threatened by your pretence.

The Psalms are full of what you're scared to say:

- Why?
- How long?
- Where are You?
- Do You even see this?

That's not unbelief. That's relationship without cosmetics.

This week, stop arguing in your head and start speaking plainly:

- "Lord, I'm angry."
- "Lord, I'm tired."
- "Lord, I don't understand You."
- "Lord, I don't like what You allowed."

Then sit quietly.

Not because you'll like the silence - but because you're finally being real.

Faith isn't pretending. Faith is staying in the conversation.