There's a moment every helper reaches when kindness starts to feel like self-harm.

You've explained it. Encouraged them. Prayed for them. Sent the resources. Taken the calls.

And still - nothing changes.

This is your permission:

Stop rescuing grown people from grown decisions.

You are not their saviour. You are not their parent. You are not their rehabilitation centre.

This week, draw one line:

- "I can't keep having this same conversation."
- "I'm not available for that."
- "I love you, but I'm stepping back."

If they get angry, don't panic. Anger is often the first response when access is revoked.

You're not becoming cold. You're becoming free.
